3 - E: Discussion/Reflection Questions

Discussion/Reflection Questions

- Thinking back to the healing dream in section 1-c, can you come up with a few hypotheses about why variations of connective tissue might have an impact on all the body systems outlined in section 3-a?
- How does the reductive model hinder our ability to appreciate the connections between systems (whether biological, social, or political)?
- What approaches might be helpful to counter the problems of the reductive model?
- How can people with variations of connective tissue support one another and advocate for better care? How can people with typical connective tissue help?
- Review each of the principles of disability justice. Write down a couple of notes about how each one has some value to people with variations of connective tissue.
- Which of the principles of disability justice deal with connection and how?

Module-Level Questions for Reflection

- What did you learn in this module? What do you want to learn more about?
- Where else do you see the reductive model of science and/or medicine? How does what you have learned in this module help you think about the possible dangers of reductive thinking in other domains?
